Japanese Pankhurst Discusses Suffrage

Education of the Women Is the Most Crying Need of Japan, She Says, In Discussing Serfdom of the Women in Her Country.

Achieve, Aug. 6.—The woman most talked of in Japan, excepting only the Empress, is Mrs. Akiko Yosano, poetess, essayist, preacher to the "common people" and leader of the dramatic Japanese movement to acquire greater rights for womanhood. Both Mrs. Yosano and her accomplished husband are "dreamers" (they call it themselves) but they are writing every day about life, in such a simple and practical way that even the least educated and simplest minds understand. Mrs. Yosano's writings appear in newspapers and magazines throughout Japan. Her extraordinary writings appear in newspapers and magazines throughout Japan. Her extraordinary versatility is evidenced by her writing classical verse at one moment, next on woman's freedom the next and following that with an article on bad manners in street cars.

In a tiny Japanese house tucked away in the heart of the great Oriental metropolis where this poetess and apostle of woman's rights carries on her work, she had spent some years in Paris and had not only lived in the Latin quarter but also in the historic district of Montmartre. Her husband had gone to Paris to study in a new school of poetry and she as his disciple had followed him there. With fervor they had flung themselves into the art life of the great French metropolis. She came back first to Tokyo and began to write. For a considerable time she devoted herself to writing of love and her "Songs of Love" were printed throughout Japan. She quickly developed a taste for writing upon the practical problems of her fellow women and it is in this field of effort particularly that she has come to be known as a national figure, taking the lead in all this modern Japanese movement which is inaugurated for the betterment of the women of Nippon.

The universities of Japan with one exception are not opened to women and the first practical step which should be taken for the emancipation of women in her country she believes is to open at once the gates of all universities and thus give to woman the opportunity for a higher education and self-development.

"I have read somewhere that in America the woman is dependent upon the man. I seek for our woman has caused a certain loss of charm and feminine attractiveness," she said, "but I do not fear such a loss."

She recalled the doctrine of Confucius which gives to women the inferior place and alluded to the proper place of the subject that is printed today in almost every Japanese school book. It concerns the old Chinese idea that when woman becomes too active—literally, when the woman talks too much—the household falls. Man is the fountain-head and man alone is responsible.

The story is told in this way: Years ago a Chinaman held his hen crying every morning in a most unusual way. One day while returning from a visit to the Emperor the man was killed. The neighbors noticed that the hen adopted crying immediately so the crying hen became symbolic of peril. When the Japanese adopted this tale with the thousands of other Chinese fables they made the hen stand for woman—and so crying, troubled and revolting woman became the symbol of family disorder and disaster.

Mrs. Yosano did not agree that the predicted evil would follow greater freedom for women. But she wanted Japanese women to be given a fighting chance. She wanted some sort of equity. She scarcely believed that the women were ready for suffrage. That might come later. Meanwhile there were so many other things that were just and must be had.

"I want more European houses in Japan for Japanese," she declared, "and I want Western dress for women. I think we must come to it. I admit the old court costume for women would please me most, but since we can't have that, let us follow the people of the West."

Her own good changed, too. We need to strengthen the stamina of our race. We must get into the habit of eating meat. Eternal fish may give us brains but it will weaken our body.

Our body must be made stronger. We cannot afford to sleep and cannot compare with Western races in the matter of energy or persistence in any undertaking.

"Are we really lacking in the desire to live, as compared to Europeans?" She did not like to believe this to be true and would prefer to think that the lack is a "temporary suspension of desire." The chief reason for this, she believed, is the paucity of nourishment in Japanese food, with the result that the Japanese physique is inferior even to that of the Korean or Chinese. "We cannot expect energy to spring from a bad physique and it is quite reasonable to suppose that this singular lack of desire to make the most of life on the part of the Japanese is due to had nourishment of the body and a decided lack of the spirit."

She went on: "With the body and the spirit of the people both impelled to sleep it is no wonder that they have less power of appreciation, of creation, of understanding and of endurance. Take people who fall asleep so easily on trains. Naturally, they lack the intellectual ability of study scientifically how the cars on which they travel are constructed and they cannot afford to be at ease without even understanding the nature of things half way.

"They have no attachment for either old or new things. They do not mind in what way they live as long as they can continue to live. They are willing to temporize in order to get along for the time being and they adopt or adapt any old or new thing so long as these things render a temporary service."

FAIRFIELD TRIBE OF RED MEN WILL HAVE NOVEL FETE

Will Adopt New Members With Full Ceremonial in Forest Surroundings.

(Special to The Farmer.) Fairfield, Aug. 6.—For the first time in the history of the state, the tribe of the Fairfield, will hold a novel ceremony on August 21, when in the depths of the most isolated yet historic woods in the county they will adopt a class of over fifty members. The initiation will take place in Perry's woods, the spot where the colonists under Roger Ludlow, at one time lieutenant-governor of the state, camped the night before they had the Pequot swamp fire that ended the Indian reign in the state of Connecticut. According to history it is also the spot where the Pequot tribe held their big council and their last song and war dance.

The degree team under the leadership of Harry Henderson will work the initiation after the ceremony a clam bake will be held at the grove where sports will be indulged in. A monster attendance is expected. Delegates and members from lodges all over the state, including the Great Inchoonee F. D. Downs of Boston, Mass., will be present to take part in the open air exercises. Past Sachem Otis King of the local tribe will deliver one of the principal addresses.

Unquova tribe was formed only a year ago. It is a live organization and numbers more than 88 members. It has held many interesting sessions during its official life.

VETERANS, PAST 90, HONORED BY ELIAS HOWE POST, G. A. R.

Judge Beers Voices Sentiments of Civil War Survivors at Pleasant Meeting.

Two veterans of the Civil War whose combined ages are 187 years, celebrated their birthdays yesterday by attending the afternoon meeting of Elias Howe Jr. post, No. 3, G. A. R. With a group of their old comrades "the boys of '61" they gave reminiscences of the days when they were young. The aged men were William Tait of 208 Main street, founder of the Tait paper mills, who is 92 years of age, and Almon H. French of 11 Glen avenue, who reached his 90th birthday yesterday. Both men served in the Twenty-third Conn. Vols., enlisting from Bridgeport and both intend, if possible, to attend the reunion of that organization at Savin Rock on Thursday.

Mr. French, who is surgeon of the post, occupied a seat next to the flag on the right hand of Commander Barnum. Mr. Tait was seated at the left of the commander and over the chairs which they occupied were spread American flags. During the exercises of the afternoon Commander Barnum called the members of the post to their feet and all gave a salute to their two aged comrades.

Judge Beers on behalf of the Grand Army post congratulated Commander Tait and French. "Here," he said, "we have evidence that service in the army tends to longevity. Here we have two comrades whose lives have been extended by what nature has done for them in the way of strengthening their bodies and mind under the stress of circumstances brought by military service."

"When they were boys the state of Connecticut was a wilderness. It was common knowledge that Washington state was called going west and west of the boundary of New York was a trackless wilderness. Part of the state of Ohio was called the Connetquot reserve and was owned by and was part of the state of Connecticut."

"This state sold that tract to Ohio later on and the money, as I suppose, was used for a school fund. A portion of the income from that fund is given each year to every town and city in the state for the support of the public schools. Where in their day the only means of communication was by letter or word of mouth, they have lived to see the telephone, the telegraph and the Marconi wireless telegraph."

"With all these strange things that they have seen come to pass they have had the honor of serving their country and fighting for its flag which now adorns their chairs. They are here this afternoon perhaps not as well in body but practically as well in mind as they ever have been. It is an honor to call them comrades and extend to them the soldiers' greeting and salute, and we wish that their same health and happiness they now enjoy."

At the conclusion of Judge Beers' remarks all the other members of the post arose to their feet and saluted Commander Tait and French.

One of the most interesting features of the afternoon meeting was the reading of a historical paper by Dr. George L. Porter.

Dr. Porter's paper dealt with events in the United States directly after the Revolutionary war and particularly during the period directly after the French revolution when Gen. Howe had come to this country as minister from France.

He said in part that history was repeating itself and that this country in its dealing with England and Germany was facing the same diplomatic situation which it faced in 1793 with France.

WOMAN PARTS FIGHTING DOGS, THEN COLLAPSES

Animals in Furious Struggle on Beach When Elderly Woman Interferes.

(Special to The Farmer.) Fairfield, Aug. 6.—While trying to separate a couple of bulldogs that had clinched in what looked and sounded like mortal combat, Mrs. M. Graw, of Fairfield beach, was bitten in the right arm and badly scratched the morning. When the dogs were separated, Mrs. Graw, who is 60 years old, fainted from excitement and required medical attention.

One of the dogs is owned by Mrs. Graw and the other is the property of Henry Thompson who also resides at the beach. "Dog Warden" LeRoy P. Beach is investigating.

Peter Obshanytz, of Yonkers, N. Y., passed through town yesterday afternoon with their motorcycles at a pace which State Policeman Anthony Fellows thought was a bit unreasonable. He looked them up, charged with speeding and not having required registration papers. They were fined $1 and costs each by Judge Bacon Wake-man today. Neither of them had any money, so they left one machine as security. On the other they started back to Yonkers to dig up $19.03, the total costs of the cases.

New ceilings are being placed in several rooms in the Sherman school and maple floors are being laid in the Mill Plain school.
